Kerrville, Texas

Welcome to Kerrville - Schreiner Park

2385 Bandera Hwy

Kerrville-Schreiner Park is a beautiful 517-acre recreation and camping park on the Guadalupe River. Our park is home to an abundance of wildlife including whitetail and black buck antelope, axis deer, rabbits, fox, birds, butterflies and more.

Full hook-up water / electric & sewer RV sites available in 30/50 amp; tent sites, cabins, dining / recreation halls, playground, volleyball / basketball courts also available in this patrolled family oriented park. Smoking in parks is prohibited by City ordinance.

History

Kerrville-Schreiner Park began as a city park built by the C.C.C. in the 1930's then deeded to the State of Texas and became a State Park. On February 13, 2004, Kerrville-Schreiner Park was transferred back to the City of Kerrville under authority of Texas House Bill 2108. Improvements to the park included the addition of sewer connections to both RV camping loops on the river side of the park, 23 new mini-cabins, shoreline stabilization and water sports area development, renovation of restrooms and group facilities.

Reservations

For reservations call (830) 257-7300 or e-mail questions to kerrpark@kerrvilletx.gov. # OUR BIRDS

Plad-billed Grebe

These birds' toes have lobes extending out from the sides, which makes it a swimmer to feel any duck. The plad-billed grebe is pigeon-sized, brownish in color and has a chicken-like beak. The plad-billed grebe is commonly found in marshes and ponds across the United States. Although preferring freshwater, this bird will resort to salt water in the winter if its freshwater habitat freezes. The plad-billed grebe produces five to seven whitish eggs that are stained brown. Their heels are anchored to plants in ponds and marshes and camouflaged by the floating vegetation.

Double-crested Cormorant

Double-crested Cormorants are large birds, growing over two feet long, with a wingspan of four feet. They are mostly black with an orange throat. They have a long neck and webbed feet. Cormorants are water birds, and are found at lakes, rivers, streams, marshes, bays, and coasts. Double-crested Cormorants usually travel, feed, and roost in groups.

Black Vulture

The gregarious black vulture roosts, feeds, and soars in groups, often mixed with turkey vultures. Adult, glossy black feathers can show iridescence in the right light. Whitish inner primaries often hard to see on the folded wing. Whitish legs contrast with dark gray head color. Skin of head wrinkled; bill dark at base and tipped ivory or yellowish. The Black Vulture has been known to hiss when threatened.

American Coot

The American Coot is a plump, chicken-like bird with a rounded head and a sloping bill. Their tiny tail, short wings, and large feet are visible on the rare occasions they take flight. Coats are dark gray to black birds with a bright white often dive), but on land they look more chicken-like, wading rather than waddling. An awkward and often clumsy flier, the American Coot requires long running take offs to get airborne and foreheads. The legs are yellow-green. At close range you may see a small patch of red on the forehead. You'll find coots eating aquatic plants on almost any body of water.

Blue Jay

Large-crested songbirds with broad, rounded tail. Blue Jays are smaller than crows, larger than robins. They are white or light gray underneath, various shades of blue, black, and white above. Blue Jays make a large variety of calls that carry long distances. Most calls produced while the jay is perched within a tree. Usually flies across open areas silently, especially during migration. Stuffs food items in throat pouch to cache elsewhere; when eating, holds a seed or nut in feet and pecks it open. A favorite food is acorns.

Northern Mockingbird

A medium-sized songbird, a bit more slender than a thrush and with a longer tail. Mockingbirds have small heads, a long, thin bill with a hint of a downward curve, and long legs. Their wings are short, rounded, and broad, making the tail seem particularly long in flight. Mockingbirds are overall gray-brown, paler on the breast and belly, with two white wing bars on each wing. A white patch in each wing is often visible on perched birds, and in flight these become large white flashes. The white outer tail feathers are also flashy in flight. It usually sits conspicuously on high vegetation, fences, eaves, or telephone wires, or runs and hops along the ground.

Yellow-rumped Warbler

Shrubs and trees fill with the streaky brown-and-yellow birds and their distinctive, sharp chips. Yellow-rumped Warblers are fairly large, full-bodied warblers with a large head, sturdy bill, and long, narrow tail. In summer, both sexes are a smart gray with flashes of white in the wings and yellow on the face, sides, and rump. Males are very strikingly shaded; females are duller and may show some brown. Winter birds are paler brown, with bright yellow rump and usually some yellow on the sides. Yellow-rumped Warblers typically forage in the outer tree canopies at middle heights. They're active, and you'll often see them sally out to catch insects in midair, sometimes on long flights. In winter they spend lots of time eating berries from shrubs, and they often travel in large flocks.

Northern Cardinal

The Northern Cardinal is a fairly large, long-tailed songbird with a short, very thick bill and a prominent crest. Cardinals often sit with a hunched-over posture and with the tail pointed straight down. Male cardinals are brilliant red all over, with a reddish bill and black face immediately around the bill. Females are pale brown overall with warm reddish tinges in the wings, tail, and crest. They have the same black face and red-orange bill. Northern Cardinals tend to sit low in shrubs and trees or forage on or near the ground, often in pairs. They are common at bird feeders but may be inconspicuous away from them, at least until you hear their loud, metallic chip note.

Great-tailed Grackle

A big, brash blackbird, the male Great-tailed Grackle shimmers in iridescent black and purple, and trails a tail that will make you look twice. The rich brown females are about half the male's size. Flocks of these long-legged, social birds strut and hop on suburban lawns, golf courses, fields, and marshes in Texas, the Southwest, and southern Great Plains. Great-tailed Grackles eat plant material year-round, including grains such as corn, sorghum, and oats as well as fruits. In summer and early fall, animals make up half or more of their diet, with females eating up to 80% animal matter. Prey includes grasshoppers, beetles, spiders, bees, wasps, snails, worms, slugs, and moths. Grackles also feed on tadpoles, frogs, lizards, snakes, fish, and small mammals such as mice and shrews, as well as bird eggs and nestlings.

American Goldfinch

Small finch with a short, conical bill and a small, head, long wings, and short, notched tail. Adult males in spring and early summer are bright yellow with black forehead, black wings with white markings, and white patches both above and beneath the tail. Adult females are duller yellow beneath, olive above. Winter birds are drab, unstreaked brown, with blackish wings and two pale wingbars. These are active and acrobatic little finches that cling to weeds and seed socks, and sometimes mill about in large numbers at feeders or on the ground beneath them. Goldfinches fly with a bouncy, undulating pattern and often call in flight, drawing attention to themselves.

Black-crowned Titmouse

A bird of Texas and northeastern Mexico, the Black-crowned Titmouse is common in oak woods and towns. The black-crowned Titmouse nests in hole in tree, built of leaves, moss, dried grass, hair, strips of bark, and sometimes feathers. Lined with hair or similar material, it cleaves insects from bark and foliage. Hangs upside down to reach insects. Holds food under feet to peck it. Population appears to be stable.

American Robin

American Robins are fairly large songbirds with a large, round body, long legs, and fairly long tail. Robins are the largest North American thrushes, and their profile offers a good chance to learn the basic shape of most thrushes. American Robins are gray-brown birds with warm orange under parts and dark heads. In flight, a white patch on the lower belly and under the tail can be conspicuous.

BUTTERFLY THEATER

Daily Rate: FREE

The Kerrville-Schreiner Park Butterfly Theater was designed and installed in 2000 by the Friends of Kerrville-Schreiner Park. Ernest Tremayne, who passed away in 2007, was responsible for the vision, design and installation of the garden and the irrigation system. The is approximately 104'x104' and is enclosed by deer-proof fence. In the center of the garden is fire ring with seating. A raised circular bed separates this area from the remainder of the garden. A circular crushed granite pathway further separates it and allows for viewing the garden on both sides. There are several mulched paths by flags for the milkweed which are used for data collection.

The vegetation consists almost entirely of Hill Country native plants including trees, shrubs, annuals and perennials. Both nectar and larval plants have been donated by Texas Master Naturalists, the Native Plant of Texas, local nurseries and private citizens. In addition to the butterfly population one can expect to see a variety of birds, including hummingbirds, being drawn to the habitat.

In 2006, the garden was certified as a Monarch Way Station by the Monarch Watch Program, an educational outreach program based at the University of Kansas. In 2007 a group of volunteers began to collect data at the garden for the Monarch Larval Monitoring Project. This citizen science project, sponsored by the University of Minnesota, involves volunteers from across the US and Canada in monarch research by collecting data on larval monarch populations and milkweed habitat.
